

Chiba University received the ISCN award 2017

Chiba University received the ISCN award Excellence Student Leadership category in June 2017. The ISCN provides a global forum for universities pursuing sustainability across their educational and research missions, and operations. Founded in 2007, the ISCN features international awards, conferences, and working groups to promote best practice exchange.

The International Sustainable Campus Excellence Awards recognize sustainable campus projects that demonstrate leadership, creativity, effectiveness and outstanding performance in the areas of Building and Innovative Infrastructure, Campus Planning and Management Systems, Innovative Collaboration and Student Leadership. Student Leadership category is given to outstanding student projects or campaigns contributing to the sustainable campus and encouraging other students to start their own initiatives to make a difference.

At the awards ceremony

About ISCN

<http://www.international-sustainable-campus-network.org/>

About the award

<https://www.international-sustainable-campus-network.org/awards>

About 2017 Award Winners

<https://www.international-sustainable-campus-network.org/awards/2017-awards>

Evaluation of Chiba University

Established all the way back in 2003, the student EMS committee has led the charge at Chiba for the University and its campuses to have certification according to the ISO14001 guidelines. As part of the whole Plan-Do-Check-Act process that is central to the ISO framework, this student group participates in creating and executing action plans for setting targets, monitoring and measurement, performing internal audits, and working with external auditors. In addition to the formal certification/EMS work, the student group also supports awareness and educational activities and charity work in Japan. They also prepare the University's annual environmental report.

More information on Chiba University's student-led EMS can be found at https://www.slideshare.net/ISCN_Secretariat/2017-iscn-awards-chiba-university

Contact Information : kankyo-iso@office.chiba-u.jp